

My favorite author is E.B White. I enjoy his books because every time I read it, I plunge into a world of imagination. I can visualize the farm that Wilbur lived on. I can hear Louis's call with his trumpet, and many other things. Although there are many fiction books out there, I like this author specifically because he not only writes with incredible detail and sophistication, but also because his books teach a lesson. Wilbur wanted to pout and cry when he realized that the farm owners were eventually going to kill him, however, Charlotte saved his life by making miracles for Wilbur, and eventually dying for him. The lesson in this book is that a good friend sticks closer than a brother. In Trumpet of The Swan, Louis felt like his life was ruined when he realized that he couldn't honk. However, his father is determined for Louis. He broke into a music shop and stole a trumpet. Although it took a while, eventually, Louis could make beautiful trumpet sounds. The moral in this book is that if you meet an obstacle, you should keep on pushing forward no matter what. This is why I like the author E.B. White.

Reading in general is fun and important. Reading is a fun hobby most people enjoy. You can do it as a pastime and as an educational tool. The thing about reading is that when you read a book, you realize there are no limits in books. Reading is also important to you in your life. If you had a heart attack at this moment, a doctor would come and help recover you to perfect condition. That doctor would have needed to read many books about cells and the body in order to do his healing. If you did something illegal, you would need to go to a judge. The judge would have needed to read a bunch of books about justice and laws to have his job. The point I'm trying to make is that reading is fun and important to your life.
